

Lin SUTHERLAND
University of Western Sydney

Dr Frederick Lin Sutherland is an Adjunct Professor, School of Science, University of Western Sydney and Senior Fellow, Geoscience, Australian Museum, Sydney. His MSc, University of Tasmania and PhD, James Cook University of North Queensland, studies focused on Cenozoic volcanic settings, a continuing interest. Other fields include mineralogy, particularly high pressure phases, zeolites and gemstones, petrology, particularly igneous intrusions, pumice strandings and native stone implements, and meteorite impact mass extinctions. A Fellow of The Geological Society of Australia and Institute of Australian Geoscientists, he has written many scientific publications, popular articles and four general geology books.