

Lei HUANG

China Meteorological Administration

Dr. Lei Huang got his Ph.D in Institute of Geographical Sciences and Natural Resources Research, Chinese Academy of Sciences (CAS). He worked as a postdoctoral fellow from 2004 to 2006 in CAS and then worked as an associate professor in National Climate Center of China Meteorological Administration. His main research interest is climate change. He has participated in China National Assessment Report on Climate Change as a major contributor and participated in China National Assessment Report on Risk Management and Adaptation of Climate Extremes and Disasters as a lead author.