Development of improved vertical mixing parametrizations for use in ocean models, specifically the Regional Ocean Modeling System (ROMS). Modeling of internal tides and tidal mixing in the Antarctic and Indonesian seas and the waters around Australia, investigating the sensitivity of the results to warming deep water, sea ice, shelf break fronts, and stratification. Investigating tidal impacts and the effects of the critical latitude in these simulations. Investigating the simulation of tidal and wind mixing using regional models for inclusion into larger scale global models. Evaluation of observational data, including mooring and CTD/LADCP data, for tidal impacts and mixing.
